PARNELL'S manifesto, which made its appearance on the 25th, is a document of great length, in which the Irish leader boldly defies his enemies and appeals to the people of Ireland to sustain him in his half-hearted way in the great emergency which confronts them and him.

THE accounts of the postmaster at New Orleans for the first twenty-two days of November have been received at the Post Office Department. They show that the receipts for the period were $1,124, against $38,552 for the first twenty-two days last year, when the Lottery law was not in force.

An epidemic of influenza prevails at Fuenkirkchen, Hungary. One thousand persons in the place are suffering from the disease. The medical officer has summoned a conference of the doctors to decide what course to follow. Many cases of the disease resemble typhoid fever, while others are attended with a copious hemorrhage from the intestines.

CONGRESSMAN BOWDEN of the Second district of Virginia has notified the House committee on elections that he will contest the election of John W. Lawson, his Democratic opponent to the Fifty-second Congress, on the ground that voters in Republican precincts were prevented from voting by dilatory tactics practiced by Democratic election officers.

QUEEN REGENT EMMA has issued a proclamation declaring Princess Wilhelmina Queen of the Netherlands. The Queen Regent says: "May her throne find the solid support, fidelity and devotion of her people. I accept the responsibility during her minority, confiding in God and praying that my task shall be so fulfilled as to assure the welfare of the country and the consolidation of the kingdom."

CHIEF JUSTICE FULLER, in the Supreme Court of the United States, on the 24th, announced the decision of the court in the case of Juzigo, the Japanese sailor, under sentence of death by electricity at Sing Sing, N. Y. The court sustains the decision below. It decides that the New York Election law is constitutional, on the grounds taken by it deciding the case of Wm. Jenner.

MRS. JANE GRANT GILMER HOWARD, widow of the late General Benj. C. Howard, died in Baltimore, Md., on the 25th. She was conspicuously identified with social life and charitable work. She was for years president of the great Southern Relief Association, and in 1888 inaugurated a fair in Baltimore which netted nearly $200,000 for the Southern civil-war sufferers. Her life was one long career of good works.

THREE Navarrese rioters and murderers, George Singleton, Key, Edward Smith and Henry Jones, who are in jail at Baltimore, Md., under sentence of death, when told of the decision handed down in their case in the United States Supreme Court, on the 24th, expressed no surprise and were apparently unconcerned. They are hopeful that the President will commute their sentences. Should he not do so, they are, they say, ready to march to the gallows.

TWO HUNGARIANS, Mike Horudick and Dennis Chasany, were arrested for attempting to wreck a train on the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western road, near Plymouth, Pa., on the 25th. The Hungarians were seen trying to fasten two large coupling-pins to the main track, by the fireman and engineer of a coal train, who took them to the lockup. As the express train was nearly due, an awful calamity was probably averted by the timely discovery of the obstruction on the track. The men were held in $10,000 bail for trial.

NEWS AND NOTES.

A Summary of Important Events.

PERSONAL AND GENERAL.

DR. A. M. TURNER, of Falkville, an ex-member of the Alabama Legislature, choked his wife and his little daughter to death on the 24th. The doctor had twice been in an insane asylum. The child raised an alarm before being killed, and when citizens rushed in they found the doctor in a wild frenzy. He declared that his wife had tried to kill him and that he acted in self-defense throughout.

INTERVIEWS with the leading Irish citizens of Minneapolis show a preponderating sentiment in favor of the retirement of Mr. Parnell.

MISSOURI STATE NEWS.

Missouri's New Judges.

Governor Francis has announced the appointment of Judge John L. Thomas, of Jefferson County, and Judge George R. MacFarlane, of Audrain County, as Supreme Judges, to fill the positions created by the adoption of the Constitutional amendment at the recent election. The new Judges will assume their judicial functions January 1, 1894. The appointments are for two years each.

Judge John L. Thomas was born September 16, 1839, in what is now Iron County. He was reared on a farm, and educated in Arkansas. He taught school and read law from 1853 to 1859, and was admitted to the bar in 1859, while living in Crawford County. He moved to Hillsboro, his present home, in 1858. In 1870 he was elected member of the Legislature, and served as chairman of the judiciary committee of that Assembly. He was re-elected in 1872 and 1874. In 1880 he was elected Judge of the Twenty-sixth judicial circuit, and was re-elected in 1882.

Judge George Bonnett MacFarlane was born on a farm in Callaway County, Mo., in 1835. He received a liberal education at his father's thorough training in the rudiments of a classical education, and afterwards attended the University of the South, at Lexington, Va. He was admitted to the bar at Fulton, Mo., in 1856. A Union man, because he thought secession wrong, he took no active part in the hostilities of 1861-62. During the whole of the war he lived upon his father's farm, taking such care of his parents and his two daughters as he demanded. In 1865 he removed to Mexico, Mo., and commenced the practice of law. In 1867 he was appointed by Governor R. Gratz Brown a judge of the probate court, and in 1872 was elected to the same office without opposition. Shortly afterwards he resigned, and since then has neither held nor sought public office, except before the St. Joseph convention of this year, when he was a candidate for the nomination for Supreme Judge.

Bad Man, Bad Woman.

Several weeks ago the proprietors of a St. Louis German paper, the Tribune, discovered a shortage in the accounts of their cashier and book-keeper, H. H. Spieker. They had him shadowed by detectives, and meantime made further investigation of the books. Paul McBride Again.

Paul McBride, who was recently acquitted of murder at Union City, Mo., on the 24th, has been arrested by the St. Louis police a few days ago. A reputable citizen, whose name is not given to the public, made affidavit to the fact that he met young McBride in a St. Louis saloon, that McBride was drunk, possessed a knife and revolver, and swore that he would kill on sight any officer who should attempt to arrest him at Union City. The affidavit was given to the police.

Cared with a Pocket Knife.

Judge Virgil Porter, one of the best-known men in Northwestern Missouri, was terribly slashed with a large pocket knife at Plattsmouth by W. H. Lyons, a prominent young attorney. Lyons entered Porter's office and a quarrel ensued. When Lyons left he was covered with Porter's blood, but he was himself uninjured. The cause of the difficulty is unknown.

Broke all Previous Records.

Eighty-two marriage licenses were issued in St. Louis the day before Thanksgiving, beating all previous records. Recorder Billy Hobbs said he would keep the office open until 2 a. m. rather than have any body blame him for the record, which was not married on Thanksgiving Day.

A "Frosh" Trimmer's Fate.

J. H. Snider, a New York drummer, was summarily ejected from the Southern Hotel, St. Louis, for offensive behavior toward the wife of State Treasurer Stevens of Missouri and another lady guest. He was also given an overhauling by Mr. Stevens.

Ex-Treasurer Nolan.

The trial of ex-Treasurer Nolan was set for December 31 in the Cole County court. Mr. Nolan has returned from the West, where he has been at work as an insurance agent.

Killed by an Assassin.

Jacob May, one of the most prominent citizens of Marble Hill, Ballinger County, was killed by an unknown assassin.

GLADSTONE AND PARNELL.

The Grand Old Man and the Irish Leader—The Question of the Theme of Every English Tongue—Tories and Liberals Alike Applaud His Position in Declaring that Parnell Must Retire—A Significant Reception in the House of Commons.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—It is impossible to exaggerate the political excitement now prevailing in consequence of the Parnell episode. Such a crisis has never been witnessed in English politics before except on the occasion of the overthrow of a party by a vote in the House or at the polls. In fact, the fate of both the Liberal party and of home rule in Ireland is recognized as depending upon the outcome of the present imbroglio. The clubs, and the House of Commons, are filled with groups of earnest debaters, nothing but this all-absorbing subject being heard of. It may be said without hesitation that Mr. Gladstone's letter to Mr. Morley has raised him to the pinnacle of his countrymen's estimation. Never has the Irish leader shown his true grandeur so clearly as in the manner as by this letter, which may very easily prove to be the death-warrant of his prospects of ever again reaching the premiership, but which places him in the front rank of those who would rather be right than to be rulers. The Times and one or two other organs, which have always shown partiality toward Mr. Gladstone, are the only ones which venture to withhold the meed of praise for his conduct on this occasion, and their carping voices are drowned by the acclamations which come up from all parts of the country and in which men of all parties join alike.

As Mr. Gladstone entered the House yesterday he was greeted by a sudden whirlwind of applause that seemed to startle him by its unusual vigor. It came from both party benches, the Conservatives joining the Liberals in paying tribute to the man who had so signally demonstrated that no considerations of personal or party exigency could shake him from the performance of his duty. The contrast between the position occupied by Mr. Gladstone and that in which Mr. Parnell now finds himself is a very painful one. It is but just to state that Mr. Parnell is not himself wholly responsible for the last mishap to his reputation—the acceptance of a re-election to the leadership of the Irish party at a moment when Mr. Gladstone had already signified his desire for his retirement; thus making Mr. Parnell's position seem to place his personality above the tie interest of his country.

Mr. Justin McCarthy has not succeeded to the satisfaction of his colleagues in explaining why he did not show Mr. Parnell the Morley letter before the opening of Wednesday's National sittings. It seems evident that he did not make the Irish leader fully aware of the peremptory nature of Mr. Gladstone's communication. That Mr. Parnell has met with a great blow since Wednesday is apparent to all who observed him upon his entry into the House yesterday, and again yesterday. The first day he seemed as bright and buoyant as ever; while yesterday, when met in the lobby by your correspondent, he was pale and haggard, with all the appearance of a man under the burden of a recent and cruel reverse. He declined to enter into any conversation, and excused himself as speedily as possible from all who greeted him. While Mr. Gladstone was displaying unusual activity, nervously and almost excitedly darting to and fro, greeting his friends, Mr. Parnell, after entering the House unnoticed, remained sullenly in his seat, with his hat drawn down over his eyes, but intently watching the movements of those around him. The postponement of the final action in regard to the Gladstone letter until Monday, by yesterday's meeting of the Parnellites, reveals the existence of dissension in the ranks, but all the Irish members who are willing to talk declare that Mr. Parnell must and will retire. The delay is attributed by some to a desire to hear from the envoys in America before taking final action, but this is hardly more than a matter of courtesy to the absent leaders; though it is possible that they might have some important information to communicate as to the effect of one or the other course at home upon the flow of funds from America. British donations to the fund in aid of the struggle for Irish home rule have not ceased since the O'Shea trial, and but for contributions from America, the National League would be in a moribund condition for lack of money.

Mr. Gladstone, it is said, will attend the sessions of Parliament this week, and then, should Mr. Parnell remain in the Irish leadership, he will retire to Hawarden for the winter, leaving Mr. Morley to look out for British Liberal interests.

The Vote on the Retention of Parnell.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—An analysis of the vote in the various meetings of Parnellites, on the question of Mr. Parnell's retention of the leadership shows that the most eminent members of the Parliamentary group favored Mr. Parnell's retirement, while the fifty men who were insistent in season and out of season upon his remaining at the head of the Irish party in the House of Commons, were both seriously hurt about the legs. Five women were badly injured but their names were not reported. One Charles Wilson, of No. 430 Downing street, Brooklyn, sprained his leg. Two cadets of the Peckskill Military Academy were badly shaken up, and sustained internal injuries. Their names were John Aquila and Perry Barney. Emory D. Remington, Brooklyn, sustained the fracture of a leg. Two Rutgers students who refused to give their names were carried off the grounds insensible. They had received severe cuts in the face. Ambulances carried three of the injured to the City Hospital. A room under the grand stand was turned to a temporary hospital, where the injured were taken and attended by doctors who happened to be on the grounds, assisted by surgeons from the hospitals.

Many of the friends of the injured people had them carried away at once before their names could be learned. In this way a great many cases were not reported to the police. Some of those who were buried beneath the wreckage and were taken out unconscious afterwards remained, and declined to be treated. They went on the field again and found other places from which to view the game.

A Patriot's Plea.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—Mr. Michael Davitt's paper, the Labor World, in its issue today, will publish an appeal to the Irish race at home and abroad, in which Mr. Davitt implores them to raise a fund of every thing, great or small, to help the Irish race in this emergency. He says there is no hope, if Parnell remains the leader of the Nationalist party, that Ireland's cause will be saved. He declares that the Irish party contains more than one man capable of leading it to victory, and that there is sufficient patriotism there to follow a leader from its own ranks by a majority of its members.

A Young Scion of Nobility in Serious Trouble.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 28.—A young man claiming to be the son of Lord Elders, of London, is locked up here charged with being an impostor. He came here Tuesday out of money and asked Farmer Goecke for work until his remittances came from England. Yesterday he wanted flowers for the Thanksgiving dinner and the farmer came to Trenton to purchase them. The police heard of the case, and arrested the young man because he answered the description of a man who was wanted for passing bogus checks.

Down With a Crash.

A Cheaply-Constructed Grand Stand on the Grounds where the Yale-Princeton Football Match was Played Collapsed, Causing the Serious Injury of Fifty Persons, while the Reckless Lesser Hurdle—The Result of a Parsimonious Attempt to Save a Few Dollars—Partial List of the Victims.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—At noon yesterday when the newly-erected open stand was crowded with men, women and young girls to witness the Yale-Princeton football match, the whole north end gave way with a terrible crash and roar, carrying the rest of the stand with it instantly, and with a noise that sounded like thunder. The cries of the men and the shrieks of the women were wholly drowned by the crash, and the rest of the spectators sprang to their feet with shouts of fear and horror. When the wreck lay still the crowd dashed in to rescue those imprisoned under the rafters, and for over a half hour the wounded were being lifted out and carried away.

No one was killed, which was nothing less than miraculous, but a great number of women and young girls were carried off fainting. The scene and the shock of it, coming in the midst of the cheers and songs and din of trumpets of the students, was a horrible contrast, and for some time, at least, silenced the great crowd.

The stand that fell was the one erected for this game and was occupied by those having admission tickets. Only one of the stands, which held two thousand people, remained standing, with the boards upon which the people had sat sloping down to the ground.

Among those hurt, and who were not at once taken from the grounds before their names were learned were:

DOWN WITH A CRASH.
